

Car Depot Session Data Policy

1. Introduction

At Car Depot, we use session data to enhance your experience and ensure the proper functionality of our website. This document outlines how session data is collected, stored, and used.

2. What are Sessions?

Sessions are temporary data files stored on our server that help us remember your activity on the website during your visit. They are typically active while you are browsing from the moment you sign up an account or login and expire once you close your browser or after a specified period of inactivity.

3. What Information Do We Store in Sessions?

User Authentication Details: When you log in, we store session data to keep you authenticated as you navigate through different pages.

User Preferences: Sessions help store your preferences, such as user account edits, to personalize your browsing experience.

4. Why Do We Use Sessions?

Security and Authentication: Sessions help us secure user access to specific areas of the website, ensuring only authorized users can access particular information.

Personalized Experience: Session data allows us to remember your choices such as favoured items, providing a smoother and more customized experience.

Efficient Site Functionality: Sessions enable efficient site navigation, allowing you to browse listings, maintain your account, and resume activities seamlessly.

5. How is Session Data Stored?

Session data is stored temporarily on our server and is automatically deleted when the session expires. We do not store any personal information in session data that can identify you beyond your activity on the website.

6. Data Security

We take data security seriously and implement measures to protect session data from unauthorized access. We use industry-standard security protocols to maintain the confidentiality and integrity of all session data.

7. Managing Your Session Data

Logging Out: We recommend logging out after each session, especially on shared or public computers, to ensure your session data is securely terminated.

8. Changes to This Policy

We may update our Session Data Policy as necessary. However, let it be known that some changes can be made without notice. We encourage frequent referencing of this document for any updates.
